The Crystal Gazing GuideBook Lance Carter

This guidebook is an introduction to crystal gazing for fortune-telling and meditation. The method of reading the clouds seen in crystal visions is explained. The procedures of gazing are explained. The various objects that are often gazed into are described such as crystal balls, magic mirrors, and bowls of water. Information about visions is included, some of that can be applied to real world visions, which can occur with one's eyes wide open when not gazing at a crystal or crystal ball. The intention of this guidebook is to explain how to gaze and interpret the visions seen, especially of clouds. Clouds are most often seen in crystal visions and their colors are meaningful for answering questions either yes or no. Where a cloud appears in the crystal is also meaningful, such as in the center, the foreground, or the background. It is important whether the cloud is ascending or descending. Cloud colors can also be interpreted. Visions may be actual or symbolic. I learned crystal gazing as a child in elementary school from Mrs. Claire Allgood, who was the secretary for Carroll Righter, "The Astrologer to the Stars." She told me that she learned crystal gazing from her relatives in Europe. I didn't have a crystal ball of my own at that age, but used a piece of emerald green volcanic glass that was exceptionally clear. I could gaze into its translucent green depths and attain almost the same effect of gazing into a crystal ball. After of years of gazing, meditation, yoga, zen, and other practices, I began to have real world visions of apparitions. Mother Mary, Jesus, the Archangel Gabriel, my lightbody teachers and other apparitions appeared in real world visions. Using crystal balls and other objects for gazing enhances a gazer's ability to see actual visions in the real world.
