Are you thinking about buying diamond jewelry but don't want to be taken advantage of? So how will you know if the diamond you're looking at is a great value, or a junk diamond? Does it have inclusions? What's the color? Will you pay through the nose for a diamond of very poor quality? And is your jeweler doing something to conceal the poor quality of their diamonds? STOP! This may be a once-in-a-lifetime purchase, so before you spend hundreds or thousands of dollars on what could be a bad diamond (also known as 'frozen spit' in the diamond industry), read this authoritative report by a DSA-Certified Diamond Sales Professional! The fact is, diamonds vary tremendously from one to the next, and most people either aren't aware of that fact, or don't know how to gauge a diamond's quality. Really, they're not all the same! Spend just a few minutes reading this informative full-color, easy to read 40-page booklet that includes plenty of photos, and you'll not only be able to speak intelligently about diamonds, but more importantly you'll know how to judge the quality of a diamond—or spot the lack thereof. This authoritative guide will teach you in very understandable terms how to determine if the diamond you're looking at is worth the asking price, and if it's a diamond you'd want to own. Give yourself a solid education with this diamond expert's buying guide now so you can make an intelligent buying choice. Unless you're an expert, don't rely on pure luck—or what the salesperson tells you—in selecting a diamond. This diamond will be with you for a lifetime; make sure it's a good one!
